

The email teardown worksheet

Take one real brand email. Answer six questions. Rewrite the parts that fail. From angelphommachan.com/blog/how-to-write-a-brand-email

01 Who is talking?

Read the first line out loud. Is it a person or a store? Write the name of the person who should be talking.

02 What is the one thing?

Every email gets one job. Write it in six words or fewer. If you need more, it is two emails.

03 The friend test

Would you send this exact text to a friend? Circle every word you would never say out loud. Replace them.

04 The first line

The subject gets the open. The first line gets the read. Rewrite it so it names something the reader already cares about.

05 What happens if they do nothing?

If the honest answer is "nothing," the email needs a reason, not a discount. Write the reason.

06 How will you know it worked?

One metric, one window. Opens are not it. Write the click, the reply, or the reorder you expect, and when.
